

AHBA recently made a contribution to Advancing Native Missions for their Philippines project. Using primarily local workers, ANM built a kitchen and dining hall facility at Camp JeLoy, a childrens' camp which is located near Bacolod on the Island of Negros. The exterior and interior of the old kitchen was done. They had been cooking for as many as 200 children at a time in the old kitchen on clay stoves using sticks for fuel. The new building will have modern appliances and one of the staff ladies said "it will make the job 95% easier". The new building wasn't quite finished when the construction team left, but it will have windows and doors. The dining area will remain open and tables and chairs have been purchased. AHBA is proud to have been a part of this worthwhile project.
